02 Life areas

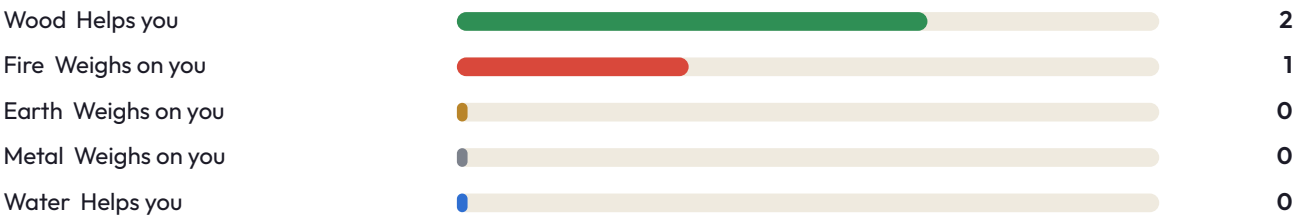

Each life area belongs to one element for your Day Master. The bar shows how strongly the number supports that area: how much of that element it carries, and whether that element helps your chart.

03 Elements in this number

How many digits of each element the number holds, against the elements that help you.

The closing digits count 1.5× as much as the others: they are the part people choose and the part said aloud.

04 Your reading

The verdict

This number scores 57 out of 100 against your chart, which puts it in the mixed band. In daily use, that means it has both helpful and unhelpful influences, so use it for everyday tasks but consider a stronger number for important matters. The closing digits, the ones you actually say aloud and pick yourself, mostly do not work in your favour for this chart.

Digit by digit

The digits 8 carry Wood, the element of growth, plans, learning and reaching out. Wood is one of your helpful elements, so these digits help: expect clearer follow-through on plans and easier starts. The digits 2 carry Fire: warmth, visibility, enthusiasm, speed. Fire is not one of your helpful elements, so this number adds pressure rather than lift, and you may notice more haste, friction or burnout when it is your main number. Keep it for short bursts of visibility, not as your everyday default. The neighbouring digits 8 then 2 sit in a feeding pattern, where 8 produces 2, but since 2 carries an element that does not help this chart, the pair tends to add effort without much return.

05 Digit pairs, one by one

Every neighbouring pair of digits, read left to right. When the first feeds the second, the second gets stronger; when it controls it, the second is held down.

Pair	Elements	Link	Effect
88	Wood → Wood	same element: adds weight to it	no change to the score
82	Wood → Fire	feeds the next digit	works against you

06 All ten digits for your chart

Every digit belongs to one element (1 and 6 Water, 2 and 7 Fire, 3 and 8 Wood, 4 and 9 Metal, 5 and 0 Earth). Use the helpful ones when you get to choose.

Good alternatives for you

When you next choose a home or unit, look for numbers such as 13 (100), 18 (100), 63 (100), 68 (100), 113 (96), 118 (96), 133 (96) and 136 (96); these are scored with the same rules as your other numbers. A house number usually cannot be changed, so keep this list for future moves.

What to do

If the house or unit number works against you, changing it is rarely worth the upheaval, and in most cases you cannot change it anyway. Treat it as background noise and balance it instead: add a favourable number to the doorplate, or lean on your own favourable numbers in daily use. To bring more Wood near your front door, add a healthy green plant or a small wooden bench, and use green tones in a doormat or a piece of art. These simple touches are traditionally linked with Wood in feng shui. Near the front door, add a small fountain, a bowl of water, or a mirror. Blue, black or wavy shapes also bring Water. Keep it simple and clean.

11 Your chart at a glance

Read right to left: Hour, Day, Month, Year. The top character of each pillar is its Heavenly Stem, the bottom its Earthly Branch (an animal). The small characters are the hidden stems inside each branch, and the line under each stem is its Ten God: what that part of the chart means to you.

How this was worked out

Your Day Master and the balance of the Five Elements in your chart decide which elements help you and which weigh on you. Every digit belongs to one element (1 and 6 Water, 2 and 7 Fire, 3 and 8 Wood, 4 and 9 Metal, 5 and 0 Earth), so each digit is scored against your chart, with the closing digits counting more and neighbouring digits read as pairs. You get the score, the digit-by-digit reasons, practical advice, and the best alternative numbers for your chart, scored the same way.
