02 Life areas

Each life area belongs to one element for your Day Master. The bar shows how strongly the number supports that area: how much of that element it carries, and whether that element helps your chart.

Career and standing

Metal · Weighs on you

Money and deals

Earth · Weighs on you

Charm, ideas and sales

Fire · Weighs on you

Health, rest and support

Water · Helps you

Friends, partners and rivals

Wood · Helps you

03 Elements in this number

How many digits of each element the number holds, against the elements that help you.

Wood Helps you		1
Fire Weighs on you		0
Earth Weighs on you		0
Metal Weighs on you		1
Water Helps you		2

The closing digits count 1.5× as much as the others: they are the part people choose and the part said aloud.

The verdict

This number scores 72 out of 100 against your chart, which puts it in the strong band. In daily use, that means it supports your natural strengths and makes tasks flow more easily, so keep it as your main number. The closing digits of the number, which are the ones people choose and say aloud and therefore count more, are mostly a mix of helpful and unhelpful for your chart.

Digit by digit

The digits 1 and 6 carry Water: flow, ideas, communication, adaptability. Water is one of your helpful elements, so this number supports you, and you may find conversations go more smoothly, thinking loosens up and you adjust to changes with less effort. It suits a main everyday number. The digits 8 carry Wood, the element of growth, plans, learning and reaching out. Wood is one of your helpful elements, so these digits help: expect clearer follow-through on plans and easier starts. The digits 9 carry Metal, which brings clarity, rules, decisions and the urge to cut away what no longer fits. Metal is not one of this chart's helpful elements, so the number adds weight rather than edge: expect sharper judgement calls and less patience with mess, and give yourself a fixed rule for when to stop refining and just decide. The neighbouring digits 6 then 8 sit in a feeding pattern, where 6 produces 8, and because 8 carries an element this chart can use, the pair tends to move things forward for you.

05 Digit pairs, one by one

Every neighbouring pair of digits, read left to right. When the first feeds the second, the second gets stronger; when it controls it, the second is held down.

Pair	Elements	Link	Effect
16	Water → Water	same element: adds weight to it	no change to the score
68	Water → Wood	feeds the next digit	works for you
89	Wood → Metal	is held by the next digit	no change to the score

06 All ten digits for your chart

Every digit belongs to one element (1 and 6 Water, 2 and 7 Fire, 3 and 8 Wood, 4 and 9 Metal, 5 and 0 Earth). Use the helpful ones when you get to choose.

What to do

If your current plate already works well or well enough, keep it. To make the most of it, keep the plate clean and legible, and park in the same spot when you can, so the number stays associated with a settled routine. When choosing a new number, favour the digits 3 and 8 (they carry Wood, which helps this chart), especially in the last positions. When choosing a new number, favour the digits 1 and 6 (they carry Water, which helps this chart), especially in the last positions.

11 Your chart at a glance

Read right to left: Hour, Day, Month, Year. The top character of each pillar is its Heavenly Stem, the bottom its Earthly Branch (an animal). The small characters are the hidden stems inside each branch, and the line under each stem is its Ten God: what that part of the chart means to you.

How this was worked out

Your Day Master and the balance of the Five Elements in your chart decide which elements help you and which weigh on you. Every digit belongs to one element (1 and 6 Water, 2 and 7 Fire, 3 and 8 Wood, 4 and 9 Metal, 5 and 0 Earth), so each digit is scored against your chart, with the closing digits counting more and neighbouring digits read as pairs. You get the score, the digit-by-digit reasons, practical advice, and the best alternative numbers for your chart, scored the same way.
